Sense and sensitivity. Art, eloquence and refined comfort. Whether classical or contemporary—or a unique hybrid of both—a room designed by Kira Krümm speaks these phrases. Through her artistic vision and approach, such common elements as floors, furniture and fixtures join together to create a visual symphony, with a melody and tempo suited to each individual client.

"I think of interior design as an art form," Krümm explains. "I view my clients as my patrons. Just as with the artists of old whose patrons sought striking and specific art works, my clients come to me for my ability to create a home ideally suited to their tastes and needs—and one that is, above all, beautiful. It is my joyous challenge to fulfill their dreams."

After majoring in Interior Design at Virginia Commonwealth

University, Krümm attended the prestigious American College in London, as a World Study Scholar. That whetted her appetite for visiting foreign lands, and she continues to travel, bringing back a cultural appreciation which she employs in her designs. "My clients are sophisticated and well traveled," she explains. "When they can afford to go anywhere in the world but prefer to stay home, I know I have succeeded."

Krümm admits her greatest education has come from 20 years of working with discriminating clients. She works closely with them to design environments that are aesthetically pleasing, emotionally satisfying and supremely functional. As her numerous awards clearly indicate, Kira Krümm's passion for artistry and disciplined approach create unparalleled homes. Advertorial.
